

PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

[All society and personal notes for the Sunday issue of the Journal, to secure publication, must reach the hands of the city editor by Saturday noon.]

At a luncheon recently given in Washington by one of the fashionable young women, a novel mode of entertaining was arranged. The invitations sent out were in Greek characters, and some of the college-bred maidens sent their acceptances in Greek. The guests were asked to wear Grecian gowns and their costumes were described as something rarely beautiful. They were of rich fabrics and fashioned in the most picturesque of styles. When the guests arrived, they were greeted by the hostess, who wore a gown of delicate blue silk with a jeweled girdle. The rooms were only lighted by candles or quaint Grecian lamps. No chairs were visible, and low divans, with quantities of silken pillows, were the comfortable seats provided. The guests were served with the several courses by colored maids in Oriental dress, and the dishes were in keeping with the whole effect. The whole arrangement was unique and decidedly novel. At another luncheon not particularly odd in any way the guests were seated at a long table covered with a white cloth. On the table were a number of small, round, silver-plated plates, each containing a different kind of food. The guests were to pick up the plates as they went around the table, and the food was to be eaten from the plates. The guests were to pick up the plates as they went around the table, and the food was to be eaten from the plates.
